

What's On Your Mind – December 2008

- Please purchase Memento, Shoot 'Em Up, The Italian Job, Billboard Dad, Dexter's Lab, The Descent, Silent Hill, Brubaker, Fear & Loathing in Las Vegas.

The above titles have been requested for purchase.

- More copies of the DVD list

Additional copies of the DVD list have been placed at the circulation desk.

- Create an online system to view the movies for rental & to see if they are checked out or not & be able to hold it for 10 minutes while you walk from your room to here.

Movie titles are available through our Catalog, and if a title is checked out, it will show as checked out in the catalog record. We do not have the technology at this time to create a separate, movie-exclusive database.

- Why can't you adjust the heat? It's freezing outside and it's freezing on west stacks because all air conditioning is on! We should be able to adjust it for ourselves, not automatically.

We are well aware of the problems with our aging HVAC system, and are currently working on fund-raising efforts to upgrade the systems throughout the library buildings.

- Do you think it would be possible for the staff to do something about the incredibly loud, obnoxious, high-pitched squeaks that emanate from the hinges of the library's doors? Specifically, the doors located on the east and west stacks couldn't be more annoying, and I am positive that every single time someone hears one of these piercing shrieks; they are distracted from the tasks at hand. In fact, the sound conjures up images for me of evil spirits being released from the depths of hell to corrupt the very sanction that "we" consider a bastion for tranquility. For the sake of all that is holy, please do something this atrocity that has inundated our serenity! P.S. WD-40 is known for making high quality products that could help in this situation.

The maintenance department was contacted and all doors have been attended to.
